

Humanitarian Crisis

the people of iraq

Dear Donor,

www.hrf.org.uk

I would like to thank you for your contributions and on-going support which have proved to be of vital importance towards our noble humanitarian aid work. Your generosity has enabled us to deliver assistance to thousands of people, and once again I am appealing to you for help.

In light of the comfort and joy we experience, there is still on-going suffering, agony and misery felt by millions of people all over the world.

Words are not enough to describe the present conditions for what is described by many as a "Deepening Humanitarian Crisis" with devastating consequences. This trauma is not just happening every day, but every hour of the day in Iraq.

As the conflict in Iraq intensifies, it is no longer possible to ignore its devastating effects on the people of Iraq. There is massive displacement of the civilian population and the numbers are staggering.

- In a country of 26 million, at least two million have sought refugee status outside its borders and another two million within.
- Since the growing violence over a year ago, the pace of the displacement has accelerated, this is the largest population displacement in the Middle East since 1948.
- For the refugees inside Iraq there is a constant struggle, they still face insecurity, inadequate supplies of food, water and medicine.
- There are thousands of orphans and even more lone parents who are fighting to survive on a daily basis.
- Iraqis who are internally displaced face even more precarious situation if they do not find the support required.
- According to Humanitarian sources, 1 of 8 children under the age of 5 face death, and
- 1 of 5 children are likely to get involved with dangerous people and criminal activities.
- If there is no support from people like us, these vulnerable people face hunger and a loss of life...

HRF has been actively engaged in Iraq since the start of the Gulf War in 1991, and has been able to provide critical support to Iraqi civilian's right up until today. Unfortunately, there is still much more we can do to try and alleviate the pain of thousands of innocent people caught up in a massive humanitarian catastrophe.

Human Relief Foundation (HRF) is urgently appealing to the UK Community to donate in order to provide food, (each food pack includes: rice, sugar, oil, tea, milk, flour and tomato paste...etc) shelter, clothing and much desperately needed medical aid. The people of Iraq face devastating circumstances; there are innocent children and weak elderly who are relying on us...

Please help us to help them
